Bifrons House is believed to have formerly been the Dower House to the principal house in Bifrons Park, which was demolished after the Second World War. According to the listing, the property was built in the mid to late 19th Century in a very similar style to many of the other estate cottages. These are richly decorated with carved barge boards, ornate chimneys and jettied first floors. The rear of the house has a beautiful stone porch with exposed timber framing. Bifrons House is certainly one of the most unique houses in Patricbourne – one of the most sought-after villages in East Kent.

During the current vendors' ownership, the house has been sympathetically extended and updated and has a partially implemented planning consent to convert a detached outbuilding into a two-bedroom annexe. The attention to detail is superb with bespoke joinery by Thoroughly Wood.

Gardens and Grounds

Bifrons is approached through electric gates over a long driveway running through wooded grounds to an oak-framed open car barn. Expansive lawns sweep away from the house with an outdoor swimming pool heated by an air source heat pump in a secret garden a little way from the house.
